

Simply Automate exclusively offers the latest in Smart Home Software

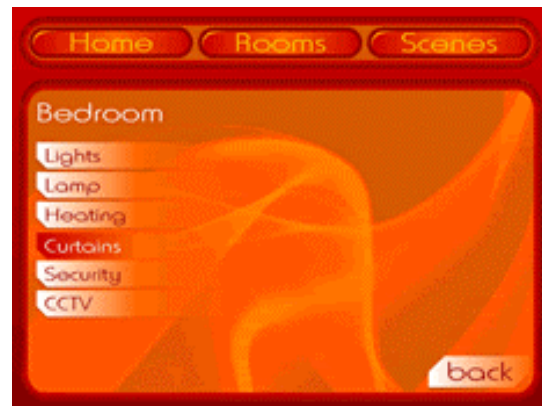

Christmas has come early for the users of smart home technology. The ability to control lighting, security, curtains, audio-visuals and even the temperature of our houses is now only a click away.

iDomus, the smart home software developer who brought us Harmony v5, is releasing the long awaited version of their latest home technology software, Harmony v5.1. An army of beta testers have waded through the trial version flagging issues and suggesting fixes, which has resulted in the most comprehensive piece of smart home software to hit the market. Designed to be exceptionally user friendly both in terms of installation and control, no longer will you rage war against a monitor, finally the sun is shining, the clouds have parted and the birds are singing, welcome to Harmony!

Harmony v5.1, the glue of smart home technology, will offer a total solution for anyone bringing their automated home together onto one screen. A lot has been addressed and improved from Harmony's predecessor v5 including the revised and enhanced user friendly interface which allows you to quickly access lighting configurations in every room around the house.

Make your home a more comfortable, safe and enjoyable place to live with the latest in smart home software, Harmony v5.1.
