

Simply Automate gets thumbs up from Channel 5's Gadget Guru!

“Smarten up your home and simply automate!” was the message from Channel 5’s ‘gadget guru’ Jason Bradbury this month.

Home automation is fast becoming one of the most prominent growth areas of the home development market. Essentially home automation systems are installations that provide households with integrated monitoring and control products which make feasible the automatic operation of many functional systems within the home (climate control; audio-visuals; lighting; security etc.). They operate by networking signals around the home to integrate the function of devices under automatic operation or in response to the householder’s instructions.

Inspired by this developing world of smart technology, Jason who presents “The Gadget Show” gave viewers a tour and insight into the benefits of his recently automated home, now equipped with innovative technology from leading home automation supplier, Simply Automate.

“Technology need not be confusing with the installation of some smart home software,” comments Simply Automate’s Managing Director Darryl Mattocks. “Our Harmony software is exceptionally user friendly and allows a multitude of functions within your house to be brought within a remote-fingers reach. In addition to Harmony, Simply Automate offers a variety of home automation solutions which we tailor to the needs and budgets of our customers.”
